Wayne Brown at the Saturday Market

This week we showcase vendor Wayne Brown of Crescent Creams. Wayne's "Nipples of Venus" debut last month was a great success. These are his version of the ORIGINAL praline created in France that had an almond, instead of pecan, base. This recipe includes toasted almonds that are first soaked in Amaretto then pressed into a luscious praline base with the entire confection lightly coated in an Amaretto glaze. The price is as delightful a treat. Gift boxes are available and make great holiday gifts. This week buy three get one free!

Welcome American Community Gardening Association!

The American Community Gardening Association (ACGA) will hold it's annual conference in New Orleans in October 2008. Greta Gladney, executive director of the Renaissance Project, and Karen Blackburn, horticulturist with the LSU Ag Center, are local conference co-chairs. Next year's conference will be unique insomuch as all of the workshops and community gardening efforts will take place in our neighborhoods. Conference participants will join hands with residents and volunteers to plant gardens, build fences, and install irrigation.
